Things Are Changed Now.
The Fourth of July, the day of our arrival at Albany, was the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, and on our arrival we were told that great preparations were making for its celebration.

Our landlord, as soon as he found out who we were, immediately came to us to request that we would excuse the confused state in which his house was, as this was the anniversary day of "American Independence," or, as some indeed more properly call it, "American repentance." We were all of us not a little surprised at this address, and from such a person. In stances, however, are not wanting of people openly declaring that they have never enjoyed so much quiet and happiness in their own homes since the Revolution as they did when the states were the colonies of Great Britain. Among the planters of Virginia I have heard language of this sort more than once.—From "Travels Through the States of North America," by Isaac Weld, Jr., 1795.

A Wedding Hoax.
There have been many foolish hoaxes since the days of Theodore Hook, but few so cruel as one mentioned by Bram Stoker in his book, "Famous Impostors." "A young couple were about to be married in Birmingham when those officiating were startled by the delivery of a telegram from London with the message: 'Stop marriage at once. His wife and children have arrived in London and will come on to Birmingham.' The bride fainted, and the bridegroom was frantically perturbed at this summarily being provided with a wife and family. But it was useless—the unhappy man had to make the best of his way through an exasperated crowd, full of sympathy for the wronged girl. Inquiry, however, showed her friends that the whole thing was a hoax—possibly worked by some revengeful rival of the man whose happiness had been so unexpectedly deferred."

Douglas went to Overton Wednesday to attend the inquest which was held to determine the cause of the death of the two men, who were killed there last week by his engine while crossing the tracks in an auto. The verdict was that they came to their death accidentally and the company was exonerated.

Engineer Bob Douglas is wondering how long the hoodoo will run. Week before last his engine struck an automobile and killed two men near Overton; last Thursday at Wood River an automobile run up on the crossing and struck his engine, knocking off the tank step, the force of the collision skidding the car around and clearing it of the train, which was moving at forty miles an hour.

Kill More Than Wild Beasts.
The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attacks. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which destroy and expel these deadly disease germs from the system. That's why chills, fever, and ague, all malarial and many blood diseases yield promptly to this wonderful blood purifier. Try them, and enjoy the glorious health and new strength they'll give you. Scott and destroying property on his homestead twenty miles from Sterling and near the Nebraska line. All the property on the homestead, valued at $5,000, was destroyed. On the land owned by Scott is a waterhole coveted by the cattlemen, and because he refused to vacate the land, the cattlemen decided to drive him off.
